Open gathering spaces for CONNECTION and SOCIALIZATION

create a refreshing CHANGE OF PACE

Never underestimate the importance of interaction—especially in times when work conversations are placed on hold and employees are connecting on their own time and in their own way. Social spaces, like breakrooms and dining areas, are the perfect respite from an otherwise busy workday and can help reinforce your organization's commitment to employee well-being. Whether team members are eating together, creating together, or simply catching up in a common space, breakrooms can amplify the culture of connectedness that so many employees flourish in.

CONNECT PEOPLE in a café style

Breakrooms allow employees the space they need to take a mental break and gather themselves throughout their work day. Research shows that taking a “time out” can go along way in maintaining mental health and overall well-being, not to mention productivity throughout the rest of the work day. So, encourage breakroom behavior by creating spaces with ample room to unwind and connect. Consider adding amenities like televisions or gaming tables to further that idea of taking a mental break from to-do lists, meetings, and tasks.

SMARTLY EQUIPPED

Maximize a small space by minimizing your storage footprint and answering the question, “Where should I put this?”

Even small touches can make a big difference. Try making updates to an existing space without making major architectural changes like removing walls or building new rooms. With a seamless look and versatile capacity, modular cabinets and storage lockers can be customized to the scale of your space, saving you valuable square footage and reducing overall cost. Dedicated break areas, no matter the size, offer more room for people to move about and interact with each other as convenient storage zones provide needed security for belongings.

OPEN AND INVITING (with a bit of style to boot!)

The idea of the perfect breakroom can conjure so many different things from so many different people . . . a stable WiFi connection, a comfy space to plop down and unwind, easy access to caffeine and snacks! It's really about meeting a variety of needs in a variety of creative ways. Designing different seating configurations is a perfect first step. Lounge-like soft seating, standing-height tables with stools, and private pods or phone booths can all add up to a fashionable and functional community space that creates balance in every work day.

a happy ESCAPE

Create a stimulating space employees will be happy to retreat to by using color and decor that spark joy.

No one wants to unwind in a boring box of a space. Create an environment people will enjoy by implementing interesting artwork—something that reflects the local culture, for example, could resonate well in terms of community pride. Play with different color schemes and upholsteries to make the space your own. Branded art is always a fun element that can bolster company values. Creativity knows no limits, so stretch those ideas!
